ROAD BUILDING IS UNDER WAY

C. C. Cottrell, state highway engineer, who has been making the rounds of the state, giving the work under construction a general inspection, states that good progress is being made on all of the projects under construction, and that much road work will be finished this season. Several new projects will be submitted to bidders within a few weeks, which will make a very complete program for this year's work.

The work on the old railroad right of way from Beatty to Las Vegas is rapidly assuming shape. The original grade has been taken down, and widened, and, where necessary, graveled. This, Cottrell states, is making an ideal highway for the southern end of the state. A few stretches of sand are yet to be graveled but all of the bridge work has been completed. It is expected to open the road for public travel by April 15.

The highway between Beatty and Las Vegas, a distance of 129 miles, will be one of the best roads in the state and will also afford the traveling public a straight line route to the southern end of the state. With the finishing of the road on the west side of Walker lake it will be possible to make the trip from the western end of the state to the Colorado river in a two-day run.

Work on the Walker lake drive way is about to commence. The contractors are gathering material for the project. This will be met by other contracts so that no time is to be lost in the completion of this road which practically eliminates grades from Reno to the Colorado river and also makes winter travel a possibility.

LETTERMAKING FOR CHINESE

(Correspondence of Associated Press.)
SHANGHAI, March 12.—Chinese of future generations will write in phonetic script and use a typewriter with only 39 characters instead of plying a brush to draw 10,000 or more hieroglyphics if mission workers succeed in an effort they are making to revolutionize handwriting in use in China for more than 4,000 years.

The work of the missionaries began last beginning to receive official sanction and they entertain hopes that eventually the Chinese brush, ink block and ink tablet will have to give place to more modern method of communicating ideas.

Their purpose is not only to simplify Chinese handwriting system but to give the country a common tongue to replace the present-day babel which renders even the native who is away from his own home district almost as helpless as a foreigner.

The system of phonetic script now used upon the Chinese was worked out in England in 1901 by Wang Chiao. Beside 39 characters, it contains ten numerals. There are no capitals.

Rev. J. G. Tewksbury, of Shanghai, secretary of the China Sunday School union, and a member of the Phonetic Pronunciation committee, who has devoted thirty years to teaching in China, has put the new script into use on American typewriters with complete success.

For this purpose typewriters with blank type faces are obtained from the factories and the characters are cut from these faces here by Chinese engravers.

ROOSEVELT TELLS HOW HE HANDLED KAISER

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, April 3.—Colonel Roosevelt is shown in the role of a diplomatic letter writer to European royalties, bending even former Emperor William of Germany to his will, in freshly disclosed correspondence edited by Joseph Bucklin Bishop, the late president's biographer, which will appear in the April issue of Scribner's magazine.

The correspondence includes letters to and replies from King Edward VII of England, Emperor Nicholas of Russia, the emperor of Japan, Albert, king of the Belgians and Queen Elizabeth of Romania, in addition to the lengthy epistles that passed between the colonel and the head of the Hohenzollerns. Writing on August 14, 1906, to Henry White, who was then American ambassador at Rome, Colonel Roosevelt said:

"My course with him (Emperor William) during the last five years, has been uniform. I admire him, respect him and like him. I think him a big man, and on the whole a good man, but I think his international and indeed his personal attitude one of intense egotism. I have always been most positive with him, have done my best to avoid any taking, any attitude which could possibly give him legitimate offense, and have endeavored to show him that I was sincerely friendly to him and to Germany. More over, where I have been forced him to give way I have been seriously anxious to build a bridge of gold for him, and to give him the satisfaction of feeling that his dignity and reputation in the face of the world were safe."

"In other words, where I have had to take part of the kernel from him, I have been anxious that he should have all the shell possible, and have that shell painted any way he wished. At the same time I have had to speak with extreme emphasis to him on more than one occasion, and on one occasion, that at Vaux-la-Petite, near to make a display of force and to convince him definitely that I would use the force if necessary."

Mr. Bishop declares that in spite of the Vaux-la-Petite incident of the summer 1902, which must have been a humiliating shock, the former emperor cherished no resentment and subsequently wrote Roosevelt the most friendly letters. He also sent the colonel a number of photographs, showing himself and Roosevelt astride magnificent horses at a maneuver of the German army. On the autographed pictures he had written: "The colonel of the Rough Riders lecturing the chief of the German army." "Total agreement about the general maxims of life and policy between America and Germany." "On the Mühlenberg, a grave discussion. Carnegie look out!" and "The chief of the German army thanking the colonel of the Rough Riders for the honor of inspecting his troops." Mr. Carnegie by the way, once had credited a rumor that Germany was building a strong fleet to attack the United States.

A letter the colonel wrote to Edward VII of England, on April 25, 1906, contains a reference to the Algeiras conference of that year, an international parley which at the time was said to have averted a general European war. The biographer states that "the secret history of this conference, which stands revealed in Roosevelt's correspondence and which is far too long for publication in the magazine, shows conclusively that it was arranged by Roosevelt at the instant request of the kaiser that Roosevelt drew up the terms of settlement which were adopted, and that he fairly compelled the kaiser to give his unwilling consent to them."

Roosevelt's impatience with the ceremonies and etiquette of courts found vigorous expression, Mr. Bishop says, when he exclaimed, after describing his experiences with potentates of various kingdoms at the funeral of King Edward, at which he represented the United States: "I felt if I met another king I should bite him." Amused and irritated by the fussy anxiety displayed by the ruler of a petty kingdom about his prerogatives and the precedence to which he was entitled, Roosevelt at another time said, drawing upon his bird lore for a simile: "He is nothing but a twittering warbler."

Writing again to King Edward of England for whom he professed a high regard, he said in 1908: "I feel very strongly that the real interests of the English-speaking people are one, alike in the Atlantic and the Pacific, and that, while scrupulously careful neither to insult nor to injure others we should yet make it evident that we are ready and able to hold our own."
